WE AT NEW HOPE ARE THE OPTION.

Research indicates that every year nearly six million Americans use prescription opioid pain medication, and in some communities, abuse of prescription pain medication has overtaken cocaine and marijuana use.

The 2002 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse (NHSDA) showed that approximately 9% of the U.S. Population has used pain relievers illegally in their lifetime. An estimated 4.6 million Americans used prescription type pain medications non-medically for the first time in 1998. This represents a significant increase since the 1980's, when there were generally fewer than 500,000 new users per year.

Today, approximately 75% of our patients suffer from a dependency on pain medications, whereas in years past dependencies to heroin were the most common. We recognize that all patients who are physically dependent on and psychologically addicted to prescription pain medication are a result of a many imbalances that require expert medical treatment in a safe, humane and effective environment, encapsulated in confidentiality.

We are an outpatient behavioral healthcare clinic that specializes in partnering with health care professionals to manage the very difficult and delicate task of withdrawing their opiate dependent patients.

This is challenging, but rewarding work, and it enables you to distinguish between legitimate pain and induced pain associated with Withdrawal Syndrome.

Generally, patients with legitimate pain are prescribed pain medication. Often times, managing these patients long term can be taxing and risky when the provider begins to feel as though the patient is drug-seeking. Ethically, it can be difficult to refuse to continue care....but what option do providers have?

“ETHICALLY, IT CAN BE DIFFICULT TO REFUSE TO CONTINUE CARE.... BUT WHAT OPTION DO PROVIDERS HAVE?”

We at New Hope are the option.

We cautiously and methodically use MMT (methadone maintenance treatment) to abolish first choice opioid use in stabilized patients. Concurrent with counseling, which we provide, and your good care, we keep you informed every step of the way. A complete treatment approach.

This packet is meant to both introduce you to our work, and to avail ourselves to you as an alternative to simply releasing those patients who pose a liability to you.

If our program sounds like a service you might use, we are available to come to you and discuss our program, how it works in detail, and how we may assist you in an area that is difficult to manage while ultimately fulfilling your true interest.....Helping your patients

I thank you for your time and your consideration of New Hope in the future.

With Warm Regards,

D. Rick Campbell, LISAC
